Our new dataset makes use of the fact that recommendations under the EU's excessive deficit procedure (EDP) provide both a baseline no-policy-change scenario and a fiscal-adjustment EDP scenario that entails a forecast of the macroeconomic impact of fiscal consolidation over the EDP horizon. For a sample of 24 EU countries to which 48 EDP recommendations were applied between 2009 and 2015, we derive country-specific fiscal multipliers as actually applied by forecasters during the crisis. Our results confirm Blanchard and Leigh's (2013, 2014) presumption that forecasters learned during the crisis. Keywords: fiscal consolidation, fiscal multipliers, business cycle	ECB Working Paper

What are the main obstacles to hiring after recessions in Europe?, 25/05/2018 http://www.ecb.europa.eu/pub/pdf/scpwps/ecb.wp2153.en.pdf This paper assesses the relative importance of perceived obstacles to hiring workers on a permanent basis faced by EU firms and studies how they depend on firm’s characteristics. Findings suggest that the main obstacles to hiring in Europe are high uncertainty, shortage of skilled labour, high payroll taxes, high wages and the risks associated with changes to labour laws. While negative (firm-level) demand and finance shocks negatively affect firms’ perceptions of obstacles to hiring, labour market structures and firms’/employees’ characteristics are also found significant. Keywords: labour market, obstacles, employment, structural reforms	ECB Working Paper
Sticky expectations and consumption dynamics, 25/05/2018 http://www.ecb.europa.eu/pub/pdf/scpwps/ecb.wp2152.en.pdf Macroeconomic models often invoke consumption “habits” to explain the substantial persistence of macroeconomic consumption growth. But a large literature has found no evidence of habits in the microeconomic datasets that measure the behavior of individual households. We show that the apparent conflict can be explained by a model in which consumers have accurate knowledge of their personal circumstances but ‘sticky expectations’ about the macroeconomy. Our proposed degree of (macro) inattention has negligible utility costs, because aggregate shocks constitute only a tiny proportion of the uncertainty that consumers face. Keywords: Consumption, Sticky Expectations, Habits, Inattention, Imperfect Information	ECB Working Paper
On the Macroeconomic Consequences of Over-Optimism, 30/05/2018 http://www.imf.org/~media/Files/Publications/WP/2018/wp18122.ashx The paper provides evidence that recessions, fiscal problems, as well as Balance of Payment-difficulties are more likely to arise in countries where past growth expectations have been overly optimistic. The mechanism that transforms over-optimism into a later recession seems to run through higher debt accumulation, both public and private. The findings illustrate the potency of unjustified optimism and underline the importance of basing economic forecasts upon realistic medium-term prospects. Keywords: noise shocks, sentiment, forecasts, recessions	IMF Working Paper

However, the Outlook also underlines that significant risks posed by trade tensions, financial market vulnerabilities and rising oil prices loom large, and more needs to be done to secure a strong and resilient medium-term improvement in living standards. Low, albeit gradually rising interest rates coupled with fiscal easing in many countries will continue underpinning the expansion, which will see moderate rises in both wage growth and inflation. Unemployment in the OECD area is expected to drop to the lowest levels since 1980, but more can be done to bring more people into the workforce. Presentation: http://www.oecd.org/eco/outlook/stronger-growth-but-risks-loom-large-oecd-economic-outlook-may-2018.pdf Related press release: http://www.oecd.org/newsroom/oecd-sees-stronger-world-economy-but-risks-loom-large.htm Hungary - Economic forecast summary, 30/05/2018 http://www.oecd.org/eco/outlook/economic-forecast-summary-hungary-oecd-economic-outlook.pdf	OECD Publication + Press Release

Economic growth is projected to remain strong but to slow somewhat in 2019 as capacity constraints bite. Real wage gains and employment increases will support private consumption, while investment will be stimulated by private firms and the disbursement of EU structural funds. Exports will benefit from robust external demand and new capacity expansion, although gains in market share will slow. Wage increases resulting from tighter labour market conditions will raise inflation, which is projected to exceed the central bank's 3% target in early 2019. Fiscal and monetary policies are expansionary. In 2018, there have been tax reductions alongside wide-spread spending increases. Statutory minimum wages have also been raised sharply, with further increases scheduled. Prudent policies are needed to prevent overheating. Furthermore, with strong economic growth, a faster reduction of the budget deficit would allow the government to finance higher future age-related spending.
